

TRAINING GUIDE

Selling the Hoardmaster

A 20-minute course for Grumbleton & Sons reps. Snacks encouraged; knights not.

★ BY THE END OF THIS COURSE YOU CAN

- Explain what the Hoardmaster does in one breath (a normal breath, not a fire one)
- Match the right model to the customer's hoard
- Handle the three most common objections
- Close the sale without eating anyone

Duration	Audience	Prerequisites
20 minutes	New and returning reps	None. Enthusiasm helps.

Course modules

Hoardmaster 3000 XF and the rest of the Coin Pushers range

Module 1

Know your hoard

Sizing is everything. Ask how many coins, how many crowns, and whether any of it is cursed. Cursed loot needs the F model.

Try saying

"What's in your hoard today, and where does it live?"

Module 2

The model codes

X adds 50% capacity with taller walls. F is rated to 2,000 °C. D doubles the width for twin hoards. Say the codes out loud; dragons love jargon.

Try saying

"For a hoard your size, the Hoardmaster 3000 XF is the one."

Module 3

Handling objections

"My pile is fine on the floor." Tell them about Gerald, who lost a crown in 1342 and found it in 1611.

Try saying

"I hear you. Gerald said the same thing."

★ COMMON OBJECTIONS

The customer says	You say
"It's too expensive."	Compared to losing a crown for 269 years? The Hoardmaster pays for itself the first time a knight leaves empty-handed.
"I'll think about it."	Of course. Dragons live a long time. Leave the flyer and the order code; they always come back.
"Will it survive me?"	Rated to 2,000 °C and covered for 1,000 years. It will survive you.

Knowledge check

Answer these before your first customer. Answers are at the bottom — no peeking, we will know.

1. What does the F in Hoardmaster 3000 XF stand for?

2. Where do coins load?

3. Is a gem a coin?

ANSWERS
