

TRAINING GUIDE

Selling the Vaultvane

A 20-minute course for Grumbleton & Sons reps. Snacks encouraged; knights not.

★ BY THE END OF THIS COURSE YOU CAN

- Explain what the Vaultvane does in one breath (a normal breath, not a fire one)
- Match the right model to the customer's hoard
- Handle the three most common objections
- Close the sale without eating anyone

Duration	Audience	Prerequisites
20 minutes	New and returning reps	None. Enthusiasm helps.

Course modules

Vaultvane 200 F and the rest of the Hoard Doors range

Module 1

Measure first, always

Most returns are a cave mouth measured once. Ask for two numbers before you quote.

Try saying

"What's in your hoard today, and where does it live?"

Module 2

Why counterweighted

A door a dragon can't open with a snout is a door left open. That's the whole pitch.

Try saying

"For a hoard your size, the Vaultvane 200 F is the one."

Module 3

The F model

Cursed hoards, fire-breathing neighbours, and anyone who sneezes in their sleep.

Try saying

"I hear you. Gerald said the same thing."

★ COMMON OBJECTIONS

The customer says	You say
"It's too expensive."	Compared to losing a crown for 269 years? The Vaultvane pays for itself the first time a knight leaves empty-handed.
"I'll think about it."	Of course. Dragons live a long time. Leave the flyer and the order code; they always come back.
"Will it survive me?"	Rated to 2,000 °C and covered for 1,000 years. It will survive you.

Knowledge check

Answer these before your first customer. Answers are at the bottom — no peeking, we will know.

1. What opens a Vaultvane?

2. Who is the hatch for?

ANSWERS

1. A snout 2. Goblins and deliveries
